I don't like to of his cage and back. I don't like to see harmless little animals in cages. Wouldn't it be nice if we could have aquirrels in Washington park like those that make Central bark in New York or Lafarette square in Washington, such a delight—nice, tame, little snimals running around free, that come and no through your pockets for nuts and that are the joy of the children who go to the mark to play! There are lots of squirrels in Cloudcrift. Do you suppose that some of them would mind being brought to El Paso to frolic about in our park!

"A kiss or two, is nothing to you, or to anyone else at all." Some poet man said that and I suppose that is what the young man whom we saw kiss the pretty girl in Washington park Sunday, felt like saying to us when he saw that we saw him do it. It was as really romantic as a reel romance. They were sitting on a bench enjoying the sunshine in Washington park Sunday morning. They were talking very

I am mighty glad that St. Patrick's cathedral is so well under way-not that I am a member of that faith but I believe very strongly in the inspirational power of beautiful church buildings. There is an esthetic uplift and a spiritual exhaltation to be gained from even a few moments spent in a beautiful church. You get the same uplift from any beautiful building but a church seems to carry a message so much deeper.

William C. Black, of Denver, Colombo has a big lot to do with the management of the Postal Telegraph in that section of the world, is spending a little while in El Paso. He most interestingly recounts some of his impressions of El Paso in its earliest days, for he visited here frequently about 21 years ago. Mr. Black tells of his first trip here, traveling through a terrible dust storm. He existed through the storm in anticipation of a bath and when he arrived at the hotel in El Paso there was hary a bath in the whole hotel.
